

Moscow: Russians and Ukrainians learning together

Ukrainians and Russians in Moscow with common goals: to learn to train foster parents and to learn alternatives to violence. See our Alla Soroka, top left, (with the teddy bear!), and Arina Litvinenko, second to the right of her.

After four trips to Moscow, our people will have the skills needed to train foster families in Odessa. This training for us comes cost free because we in exchange are training Russians to have the skills of Alternatives to Violence in their work with children, youth and families.
